It is estimated that that up to 12 million Americans have food allergies. Consideration of food allergy testing is a vital component of any comprehensive approach to ill health or disease prevention. The test is quick and easy and gives practitioners a way to discover potential allergic reactions and allergy related disease.

The test reports include reference ranges along with a suggested rotation diet. When compliance is high, patients report improvement in symptoms, elimination of long-standing health issues, and, in general, a more satisfying quality of life.
